RITA: ERIN, ZARA, CHELSEA, LYN, MONICA,

Rita's lap-top is fired up. She's clicking through dozens of digital surveillance photos, as Johnny goes through her personal stuff.

RITA

DeBecker keeps a man posted by the elevators and a personal bodyguard with him wherever... hey, c'mon, get out of my stuff.

JOHNNY

You went through my stuff.

RITA

That's different.

JOHNNY

Have you read this?

RITA

Not yet. What do you know about DeBecker's schedule?

(beat)

Johnny, I mean it. Stop that, or I'm going to hurt you.

JOHNNY

I'm just trying to get an idea of who you are—

You can tell a lot about a woman from her underwear.

RITA

I'm not wearing any. If you want to know something, ask me.

Continuity-- Eating Scene

LIAM

This was a specialty of my grandmother... I think. Don't be shy. Dig in. Eat.

(beat)

What do you think?

JAY-NAH

I like it very much.. this is what you call, "piss and vinegar."

LIAM

A little piss and vinegar go a long way.

JAY-NAH

It tastes just like Molach.

LIAM

Yes. The Molach has replaced the Big Mac as the earth's favorite fast food.

JAY-NAH

This is true?

LIAM

No, this is Blarney.

CONTINUITY SCENE. BUFFET

JESS

Well, well, I didn't know that you owned a dress Jane must have been desperate to invite you.

CHRIS

Actually Tom invited me. I'm surprised to see you—let me guess, not enough losers at the singles table.

JESS

My date is actually getting me a drink.

CHRIS

He knows how to fetch? Wait, let me guess, he's the short introvert in the corner—I know how much you hate anyone looking down on you.

JESS

And I suppose your date is the blond elementary school teacher over there. Predictable.

CHRIS

And your date must be the 20-something in the corner trying to figure out how to order a drink?

JESS

Well at least he doesn't drink so much I have to clean up after he's blacked out.

CHRIS

Give him a chance, the night's still young. Nice to see you again. I always liked you in that suit.
