EXT. ROAD - NIGHT

Annie is walking the line as part of a drunk test. A policeman, OFFICER RHODES watches her walk. He's all business and is not having it.

26.

ANNIE See. I'm not drunk.

OFFICER RHODES So you're just a terrible driver.

ANNIE I told you I'm not drunk. Hey if I was, could I do this? Annie starts to dance on the "line" . Not well.

RHODES I would hope so.(then) Okay, you can stop. I believe you. But I'm still going to have to write you a ticket.

ANNIE

What? Why?

OFFICER RHODES

Funny thing about brake lights.You're supposed to have them. License and registration, if you please.

ANNIE

Ugh. Here.

OFFICER RHODES-Oh, Wynnewood Drive. Oh, Cake Baby! You're Cake Baby.that was you.You made good cakes.

ANNIE-Thanks.

RHODES- You used to make these little pastries, you'd put something in them like a cream or a custard?

ANNIE- Cream puffs.

RHODES-Cream puffs, Delicious. I used to get served by a guy, with a wormy face.

ANNIE-My boyfriend. No, he was my boyfriend. He left when the business went under.

RHODES-You're kidding. What a dick. I'm glad I never tipped him(.Rhodes stares at her. He thinks, then rips the ticket up. Lets her go.)
